Celebrating a major lineworker milestone

Kenergy is proud to recognize Jesse Boling, Zach Edelen, David Snow and Jackson Fulcher for successfully completing the four-year Lineman Apprenticeship Program through the Tennessee Valley Public Power Association. This is a rigorous and highly technical training program that represents the industry standard for lineworker development.

Over the course of the apprenticeship, each individual completed approximately 8,000 hours of progressive on-the-job training, along with required classroom instruction focused on electric distribution system construction, maintenance, troubleshooting and safe work practices. Their training included overhead and underground line work, equipment installation, system operations and strict adherence to OSHA and utility safety standards.

This accomplishment reflects years of hard work, long hours and a strong commitment to safety, teamwork and excellence. We congratulate Jesse, Zach, David and Jackson on reaching this significant professional milestone and thank them for their dedication to our system, co-op members and the communities we serve.

Congrats to these four linemen for completing the four-year Lineman Apprenticeship Program through the Tennessee Valley Authority Public Power Association. ## Message from the President

Co-ops in your corner

Members come first

If there's one word chilling the blood of politicians across the aisle today, it's this: affordability. From housing to health care, education and energy, costs are rising everywhere—and no one is happy about it.

This time of year is especially hard. Severe winter weather drives up heating costs, and after the cold temperatures and winter storms we've already experienced, many members are bracing for higher bills at a time when everything else already costs a lot.

There are many reasons for increasing costs across the economy and in the energy sector, like increased electrification to spiking infrastructure costs and regulatory pressures. Understanding these conditions is important to make sense of how we got here. It's also important to understand how co-ops fit into the picture—and that we are on your side.

At Kenergy, we're not just an energy company, and you're not just a customer. Electric cooperatives are different from every other kind of utility, because we are owned by the people we serve. As a member, you're a part-owner of the company that purchases and distributes power to you. This is a responsibility we take very seriously.

We are speaking up for you in Frankfort and in Washington, D.C., to advocate for commonsense energy policies that protect affordability along with the reliability and safety of our energy supply. I testified in front of the House Committee on Energy and Commerce just three months ago advocating for our energy infrastructure and the cyber and physical threats our electric grid is facing.

As demands on the grid grow every day, we are also planning for the future with our members in mind. We understand that economic growth is critical—and we also know that it can't come at the expense of our existing members. Because we're a cooperative, we are accountable to you, first and last.
